The Good Doctor meets The VaPro

BY DR.
LUKE O.
SITE

Well, well, well. While I was away in the Bahamas in August our wet nurse decided to take over my front page status. I have reasserted my position and I will also talk about what was reserved for me initially: The VaPro Touchless Intermittent Catheter. Although I am familiar with tennis pro's and probiotics, I had not heard of the VaPro. In all seriousness, upon looking into it's many innovative features and its highly informative information package, I can say that I am quite impressed. There was some exceptional care taken in the design of this product and in its presentation and information.

For example, there is an evaluation form which asks a series of Likert Scale questions. The form uses the Very Easy, Easy, Neither Easy or Difficult, Difficult, and Very Difficult scale terms for the following questions after you have used the catheter:

1. Opening of the package was:
2. Removing the cath from the package was:
3. Removing the cap from the protective tip was:

4. Inserting the protective tip into the urethra was:
5. Advancing the cath through the protective tip into the urethra was:
6. Inserting the cath was:
7. Holding the protective tip in place was:
8. Removing the cath from the urethra was:
9. How important are the features of the protective tip that help protect the catheter from coming into contact with the bacteria in and around the urethral opening?:
10. How likely are you to continue using the VaPro intermittent catheter?:
