HOLLISTER RELEASES THE VaPro: A TOUCH FREE INTERMITTENT CATHETER

Product Focus

With Cathy Terr

The Good Doctor is on holidays working on his tan and hiding his assets in some offshore playground, so here I am, in the lead article!

Chair Stuff is very happy to announce that Hollister has released an exceptional touchless intermittent catheter that has a number of excellent features and options available. It has a very simple insertion and removal system as it is ready to use with "pure hydrational technology", it is evenly lubricated; and it is easy to open, insert, and remove with smooth eyelets. Being touch free, it is able to be gripped anywhere along the protective sleeve and the innovative protective tip helps shield the sterile catheter. This is designed to be especially effective in the first 15mm of the distal urethra, where bacteria congregate.

Please contact Chair Stuff for samples and also look on our website and Facebook for a host of documentation on the VaPro, including: a male and female user guide, a VaPro evaluation form, and a recommendation letter for your health care professional.

The exact details are being worked out, but it'll be like the other ones: an enjoyable day for all cyclists, whether leg or hand. Speaking of weather, we hope that is good too! The day has a relaxed circuit ride called a criterium, and we also have prizes, drinks, a BBQ, and who knows what else up our sleeve. A big thanks to Hollister for helping us out!
